

Donna Bonter

As a small child, Donna seemed hyperaware of the world and its mysteries. She was always perplexing her parents with questions, many questions that seemed more than just childhood curiosity... She seemed to know more about things she shouldn't know, the reaction of others to her mother's attire in one instance. She told her mother that an acquaintance at a party didn't like her mother's dress. Her mother asked how she would know such a thing. "She think it" was the 4yr. old's answer. Fortunately, her parents realized that something special was going on and were very supportive of her "thoughts". They just let her know early on that not everyone would understand, and there was a time and a place to announce something she "knew".

Possibly she inherited things from her grandmother's, both remarkably spiritual women. One a devout Black Irish Roman Catholic who "knew" things from time to time, the other a reformed Pentecostal who became a Spiritualist and spent time in a Spiritualist community. Ghosts, spirits, angels, all commonplace discussion in the family's home.

Reaching adolescence, the "knowing" intensified sometimes scaring Donna. Organized religion gave some comfort, but seemed to truly misunderstand her gifts. Her search began for a path that would embrace them. She found a mentor in a High Priest named Moon and soon began the study of Wicca under his tutelage. Over the years she has added Shamanism to her belief structure. Upon beginning college Donna found Stonehenge Metaphysical Center and began studying metaphysics and reverend ship. Two years in she became an ordained minister and began teaching classes, offering readings and spiritual counseling.

It was here she discovered she was clairaudient, clairvoyant and clairsentient and had the beginning abilities of a medium. She soon graduated from college and moved to the Atlanta area. It took many years of searching for her "niche", but finally she found The Nurturing Nook and quickly added them to her family. She will be offering her readings, teaching classes and helping develop a paranormal investigative group. Donnas' vision is to help other's attain their divine connection and truly live the blessed life meant for them.
